

Electrical, Mechanical and Renewable energy contractor - Harris Miller has continued its growth across Wales by completing the latest of their Renewable Energy contracts worth over half a million pounds, to supply Coleg Sir Gar with Solar Photovoltaics (PV) electrical systems throughout its Graig, Ammanford and Pibwrlwyd campuses'.

Harris Miller Director, Karl Miller, said: "The Coleg Sir Gar project came with tight deadlines, with all installation work needing to be completed throughout the summer break. The project was large in nature, as after completing the initial work we were also awarded an additional contract for the Pibwrlwyd campus. This allowed us to evidence our ability to simultaneously provide high quality installation work at three large project sites. In total we installed just under half a megawatt of solar pv in 6 weeks!"

Harris Miller were selected through a national procurement tender as the company showed they were able to provide fast, high quality and cost effective Solar PV installation solutions, whilst still retaining the highest standards of health and safety in line with the company's core values and accreditation with external safety bodies of Chas, Safecontractor and Constructorline.

Mr Miller continued: "Coleg Sir Gar now has a quality and cost effective way to save on its energy consumption, as well as reducing the business carbon footprint. The environmental benefits that come with renewable technology are at the core of our ethos and values. We are in the process of implementing ISO9001 quality management and 14001 environmental standards; underlining our commitment to ensuring that our procedures and policies are always up to date, efficient and provide the highest level of service for our private and public clients."

The contract win comes after Harris Miller's successful completion of electrical installation work at two schools for the City and County of Swansea local authority, plus the successful tendering of the electrical and mechanical at the £2.4m refurbishment and extension of Pentre'r Graig primary School in Morriston.
